

Perpetuating Excellence in Teaching, Leadership, and Learning

The PETLL Initiative is structured to address the practical needs for instructional improvement that exist in today's schools and districts. The goal of the Initiative is to create schools of excellence where every student is engaged in high quality learning, where every teacher is engaged in an intentional instructional growth process, and where every administrator is engaged in growing a staff's capability to teach at an ever-expanding level.

The PETLL initiative is a systemic process designed to address the two areas that have the greatest impact on student learning– the classroom teacher and the building instructional leader – the two leverage points educators have the greatest ability to influence.

The initiative is based on the foundational belief that we are responsible to ensure a high quality learning experience for every student and supports the creation of a system where every teacher will rise to their greatest ability level by establishing a culture of growth with excellence in instruction as the overarching goal.

The Initiative is a collaborative effort between the Kentucky Valley Educational Cooperative, Floyd County Schools, Jackson City Schools, Jenkins Independent Schools, Lee County Schools, and Magoffin County Schools. In year one, the Initiative directly impacts 5 districts, 13 K-12 schools, 5,567 K-12 students, 358 K-12 teachers, and 53 school and district level administrators in five rural Kentucky School Districts.
